How much does DirectCourse cost?
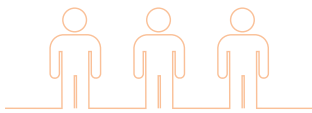

We know that when it comes to supporting others, quality training is crucial in promising better outcomes. In fact, this study proves it.

But did you know that by investing in our curricula, you can save money? (we can prove that, too!)

We will work with you to develop an online training solution built around the requirements, goals and budget of your organization.

Here is some information we'll ask of you, to help us price a DirectCourse package that works for you:

How many learners do you have?

The more learners you have, the lower the cost is per learner. Tell us about the size of your organization, and we'll let you know what that means in terms of cost per learner!

Which Elsevier Performance Manager (EPM) solution does your team require?

Our Learning Management System comes available in two options — Core Learning or Core Development. Talk to us about how you'd like to use EPM. Whether you need the basic functions, or want to learn more about classes, events, surveys and checklists — we'll help you determine which is the better option for you.

How much content would you like?

DirectCourse's largest content area, College of Direct Support, is available in three tiers to meet the span of needs — from basic training to extensive staff development. Our other content areas include College of Employment Services, College of Personal Assistance and Caregiving and College of Recovery and Community Inclusion. All areas are served on the same Learning Management System, and discounts are provided if you use more than one curriculum! Tell us more about your organization, and we'll recommend the best compilation of content to maximize your training dollars.
